THE Burials Bill is one of the most objectionable and mischievous measures ever brought into Parliament. Under the specious pretence of relieving Nonconformists from a grievance scarcely felt, it creates a new and intolerable grievance which Churchmen would, under its provisions, be compelled to bear. A few years since Nonconformists clamorously demanded exemption from Church Rates, on the ground that the money raised by them was expended for what they did not use. Church Rates have been abolished, and Nonconformists, though they do not pay a penny for the maintenance of Churchyards, claim not only the right of interment, which has never been doubted or denied, but an equal right to the regulation of Services and Ceremonies therein. Nothing can be more unjust than this. Englishmen as yet do not see this clearly, but the truth is gradually forcing itself upon them. Political Dissenters are doing their utmost to affront the Church. The Burials Bill offers an easy and inexpensive mode of doing this. They would by means of it force the services of any “minister or member” of any denomination into our Churchyards against our will. The Parish Clergyman would therefore be utterly powerless to prevent the continual desecration of God's Acre. Though we need not fear such action from quiet Dissenters, yet by this Bill the door is opened to the most noisy among them, who can easily make it an engine of intolerable annoyance to the Clergy and Churchmen generally. We trust, therefore, that at the next election, all the friends of the Church will bestir themselves, and demand from every candidate requesting their vote, irrespective of their political opinions, a distinct promise pledging himself to vote against the Bill whenever again introduced into Parliament. We believe that the analysis of the voting on the second reading of the Bill, which accompanies this, will be found especially useful for electors during the preparation for the next election, which is now becoming general throughout the country.

The Counties are printed in CAPITALS.

The Counties of England and Wales return 187 members. Of these 38 voted for the Bill (32 English and 6 Welsh), and 124 against it. 14 English and Welsh County members were absent without pairing.

Four Conservatives voted for the Bill, but none of them represented an English constituency :—Hon. Col. James Grant (Elgin), Lord Claud Hamilton (Tyrone), Hon. Col. Knox (Dungannon), and C. E. Lewis (Derry).

Four Liberals voted against the Bill, all of them representing English constituencies :—Edw. Akroyd (Halifax), W. H. Foster (Bridgnorth), William Nicholson (Petersfield), and Geo. Tomline (Great Grimsby).

Analysis of the voting :—

For the Bill, English. . .	200	Against, English . . .	202
"      Scotch . . .	44	"      Scotch . . .	—
"      Irish . . .	36	"      Irish . . .	15
	280		217

It is evident, then, that the second reading of the Bill was carried by the votes of the Scotch and Irish members, whose constituencies are not personally interested in its provisions, as the Bill applies "only to England and Wales." Had the English and Welsh Members been left to deal with it, the Bill would have been rejected.

The total number of M.P.'s absent from the Division was 149. Of these, 38 were paired; 70 Liberals and 41 Conservatives were absent without pairing.

The members in the House of Commons are 652 in number at present. The following will shew the numbers who voted, who paired, or who were absent :—

Voted for the Bill (including Tellers) . . . . .	282
Voted against the Bill (Do.) . . . . .	219
Paired . . . . .	38
Absent without pairing . . . . .	111
Tyrone, then vacant . . . . .	1
Speaker . . . . .	1
	652

No English Conservative member voted for the Bill, and no Scotch member voted against it.

In the various Divisions which have taken place on the Burials Bill during the present Parliament, the numbers (including tellers), were as follows :—

	1870	1871	1872	1873
For . . .	235	213	181	282
Against . . .	124	151	110	219
Majority . . .	111	62	71	63

Only 47 more members voted for the Bill in 1873, when the whole force of the Government was brought to bear in its favour, than in 1870, and 95 more voted against it, whilst the majority of 111 in its favour in 1870, is reduced to 63 in 1873. When the circumstances under which the late division took place are fully considered, it will be seen that a strong reaction against the principles of the Bill has arisen of late years in the country, and Churchmen have only to organise and exert themselves earnestly in this matter to insure its complete and final rejection in the next Parliament.
